

Ceago Vinegarden & Biodynamic Wines in the News

Vinegarden of Eden, California Country Magazine,
March 2007

"Located on the northern shores of Clearlake, Ceago Vinegarden is leading the way towards a new day in Lake County. Plan a trip to the lake for a wonderful surprise at Jim Fetzer's new Mediterranean-style farm and visitors center"

Virtuous Vino, Time Magazine, February 22, 2007

"What you are tasting is that specific soil, that sun, those grapes. These wines have an incredible purity about them".

The Washington Post Is it Voodoo, or old-fashioned passion?
Washington Post, February 21, 2007

"Ceago Vinegarden 2002 Merlot "Camp Masut": From organic farming pioneer Jim Fetzer, this deliciously supple and deeply flavored merlot from unheralded Mendocino County has a level of class and complexity usually associated with prestigious Napa and Sonoma bottlings".

Biodynamic Wines: They're real, they're here, they're not a fad,

Bon Appetite Magazine, February 2007

"The goal of a biodynamic winemaker is not to make a perfect wine, but to express the authenticity of the vineyard".

Biodynamics: the next trend. Food & Wine Magazine,
August 2006

"2001 Ceàgo Vinegarden "Camp Masut" Merlot: Jim Fetzer founded Ceàgo and became one of the first U.S. winemakers to concentrate on biodynamics, producing wines like this black cherry-rich Merlot".
